NEW YORK
NEWS LETTER

New York, Oct. 7.—Consternation has seized the keepers of dives and houses of ill repute in the Tenderloin. A new czar of the Tenderloin has taken the reins of government in that famous district and his name is Dooley. Mr. Dooley, like his famous namesakes of the Bowery music rooms to be a man of action. He invited a number of the most offenders to his office the other day and, in a perfectly pleasant, but positive manner, informed them that they would have to quit business within forty-eight hours, or stand the consequences. The meeting was quite friendly and the guests left smiling and joking. They had heard such commands many times before, and treated them always in the same manner, as a joke. It was really too funny, to tell them, who were such staunch friends and supporters of Tammany Hall, and paid their "dues" to the police with such regularity, that they would have to move or quit business!

The forty-eight hours passed, and the dive owners, regardless of the warning they had received, continued business as at the old stand. The great surprise came. One of the places was raided and the owner arrested; another quickly followed, and the news spread through the Tenderloin with lightning rapidity. Did Dooley, after all, mean what he said? It seemed very much like it. The other dive owners and landladies were seized with consternation and sent out in a hurry calls for moving vans to vacate their premises before the minions of the law arrived. The effect of these raids was highly beneficial and when Sunday came it proved the driest the Tenderloin had known for many years. The next question is, how long this laudable energy of Captain Dooley is going to last or how long will it be before some leading chief of Tammany Hall forces the police to desist from their efforts to reform the vividly lured district.

"What has become of the chivalry of the American men toward women?" is asked so often by elderly men and women, when they see every seat in the crowded cars of the New York elevated and surface cars occupied by men, while the women frantically hang to the straps. It is really true, that the men of today are less chivalrous than those of thirty or forty years ago? There seems little doubt that such is the case. The causes of that fact have been the subject of much speculation, and a great deal has been written about it, in newspapers, magazines and even books. Philosophical observers and careful students of existing economical conditions are inclined to believe that the woman of the present period are themselves responsible for the want of chivalry among men. For thousands of years women have occupied the position which nature and the prevailing degree of civilization has assigned to them. They were held in respect and treated, at least by the educated men, with deference and chivalry. When the women, however, chose to leave their sphere, when they ceased to be womanly, and openly competed with men in the pursuits which for several thousand years has been the recognized sphere of man's activity, they placed themselves upon the same level upon which the men stand. The women descended from their pedestal and became mere units in the army of workers, just like any man. One cannot expect the average man to look up to women, who run saloons, smoke cigarettes, drink cocktails and other strong drinks, play base ball and foot ball, affect mannish dress and do other things which to "mere man" seem unwomanly.

Nothing illustrates the present status better than the result of an advertising scheme which one of the local papers has recently started. A certain woman was sent out by that paper to ride on the crowded elevated and surface cars. At the same time it was widely advertised in the paper that the woman would give $10 to the man who would voluntarily give up his seat to her. It is quite remarkable that the woman with the $10 bill rode on the crowded cars for many hours and not in a single instance did she have an opportunity to give away a single $10 bill.

SHORT TERM OF COURT FOR MCKINLEY COUNTY.

There will be a short term of court this fall, says the Republican. Claude Doan, the murderer, will get his trial and from the amount of evidence that is against him it is very likely that Sheriff Coddington will slip the loop over Doan's head and spring the trap that will send the man into the next world. Doan can look for no clemency from the governor, as Governor Otero has no sympathy for him.

NEW YORK
FASHION LETTER

New York, Oct. 7.—Things in the field of fashion are rather indefinite just now and the woman who is wise lays only what is absolutely necessary to tide her over between seasons and waits until the modes for winter are more settled and definite. One of the fashionable society dames, who is spending the months of September and October in the country, ordered several costumes to carry her over until November, when the regular styles will be known. Among these gowns were two street frocks of cloth in the new dark grey, best known as London smoke, which seems to be one of the popular colors for the coming season. This gray is very deep, but is not of that blue shade when becomes hard in the deep tones. There is a foggy softness about it which has given it the name mentioned above.

The best hats are to be seen in this new shade of gray, trimmed with other tones of the same color, for relief, and they have the advantage of meeting with the approval of the fashionable milliners. There is only one drawback to the complete triumph of the color among the new innovations, and that is its unbecomingness to the majority of women. A color may be worn for a time regardless of this latter fact, because it is the thing, but in the end it very quickly loses its vogue among the more refined and smart women, who really set the fashions in this country.

Another innovation of the season is the use of blue as trimming on black. For this the greenish blues among which are turquoise and peacock blues, are the favorites. A touch of gold is also added to some of the smart new models.

One costume of black broadcloth was made with a long circular skirt, molded to the hips, flaring at the bottom, and having a slight train. This last would be impracticable for any but those who have a carriage at their disposal. The coat was a tight fitting model, with short rippling basques, and revers of the style called en royale. The buttons, which closed it down the front, were of cloth, set in gold rims. Underneath was worn a silk waist coat of a greenish blue, slightly embroidered in gold. A plastron of lace also accompanied the costume. A new thing in cloth frocks was the elbow length of the sleeves on this coat, with cuffs matching the revers, and a frill of lace edged with blue and gold. The hat worn with this costume was black, slightly tipped up on one side and trimmed with gold gauze and wings of shaded blue.

White felt hats are again worn this season, but the newest of them are trimmed with folds of gold gauze, or with stiff plumes, showing brown mottled effects. It seems as if a touch of gold or silver on costumes or hats will be the rage once more, from the indications of the present models. Knots of gold or silver on hats, gold metal ornaments on corners of revers and cuffs. Gold thread embroidery in flowered and broadened silks, all these are to be found in the latest styles. However, those methods of applying gold to a costume which are being used by the makers of ready made frocks will not be employed by the select and exclusive in dress, for they will as usual become too common and will destroy entirely the chic air of even the prettiest frock.

As will be seen from the description of the black cloth costume in an earlier paragraph, the waistcoat is going to be one of the popular accessories of the low cut coat, and also of draped bodices. This is essentially a French style and will be popular with those who follow the Parisians in matters of dress.

There is one thing certain, and that is, that cashmere is at last to be fashionable again, and it will be complete unless it has at least one frock of this material. The blue and green, with black combination mentioned before, is again seen in a costume of green cashmere trimmed with folds and pipings of black satin, and embroidered in Chinese blue. This material is to be had in both the Scotch and Indian weaves, the Scotch being more sharply defined. The colorings shown are exquisite, and should delight the heart of every woman and tempt her to add at least one dress in a favorite shade to her wardrobe. There are lovely new shades of bronze, peacock blue, green, red, violet, in fact, any color which a person may wish. The material is soft and clinging, and of light weight, qualities which recommend it for health as well as beauty. It is claimed that with modern improved methods of manufacturing this fabric the one fault which it possessed, that of becoming shiny with use, has been overcome. If this is true, then the material is all that can be desired in the way of gracefulness, beauty of texture and wearing qualities.

Velvet is seen on everything. If it is not used in all the material for the whole costume, there must be at least a touch of it somewhere on the frock, whether it be for street, house, evening or recreation wear. Never before has this ever before had so much serviceable material seen such an era of popularity as it will have this season. Velvet gowns will be made and worn for all occasions, and there is not a function for which it will not be in good taste. The variety in coloring and form in which this material is manufactured for this season's trade is so great as to be really confusing to the woman trying to make a choice. Cottonback chiffon velvets are better than ever before, and as for the all silk velvets, well, words cannot describe their beauty. They must be seen to be appreciated. Then there are the ribbed silk velvets and silk corduroys for street wear. Among the novelties are pompadour velvets, floral panne and short haired plush, having on it a design which looks as if it had been painted. Beautiful mouseline silks have velvet flowers in embossed effects of the same tone, or of a lighter or darker shade, upon them. Made so as to give what is called a cameo effect. It is impossible to describe all the varied ways in which velvet has been used in the manufacture of these beautiful materials. No woman should be disappointed in a choice with such a large field to choose from.

A DINNER DRESS

GOWN EVOLVED IN OLD ROSE EMBROIDERED SATIN.

The feature of this gown is its lace corsage drapery, and skirt ornaments. The tiny sleeves are formed by catching the lace together, and a straight, gathered band of it goes across the bust. From this falls the drapery. The long, pointed effect in the waist is also very new.

THE CLARKVILLE COAL MINES ARE WORKING.

The report that was circulated in Gallup last week to the effect that forty men had left Clarkville to go north, was a mistake. The Republican is informed by parties who are in a position to know, that no such number of men have left the camp. The big mines at Clarkville are working a large force and the output is increasing which is good news for the people of McKinley county.

MRS. MORELLO'S DEATH
REPORTED FROM ITALY.

The news was received by relatives at Gallup of the death of Mrs. Morello at her home in Italy. Her sons, the Morello Bros., are well known business men of Gallup, and Barney Morello only last week, had started to Italy to bring their mother to Gallup to make her home with them. It will be a shock to him to learn that his mother is dead. Mrs. Morello died on September 17 and the news was received at Gallup a few days ago.

WEAK

are caused by indigestion. If you eat a little too much, or if you are subject to attacks of indigestion, you have no doubt had shortness of breath, rapid heart beats, heartburn or palpitation of the heart. Indigestion causes the stomach to expand—swell, and puff up against the heart. This crowds the heart and interferes with its action, and in the course of time the heart becomes diseased.

After eating, my food would distress me by making my heart palpitate and I would become very weak. Finally I got a bottle of Kodol and I am cured. After using a few bottles I am cured. MRS. LORING NICHOLS, Penn Yan, N. Y.
